Gladstone Land Announces Execution of New Lease on its Farm in Oxnard, CA

MCLEAN, Va., June 28, 2018 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Gladstone Land Corporation (NASDAQ:LAND) ("Gladstone Land" or the "Company") announced that it has executed a long-term lease on a 169-acre farm located in Oxnard (Ventura County), California, that is currently being operated through its taxable REIT subsidiary. The new, 10-year lease provides for fixed, annual rent escalations throughout its term and is scheduled to commence on August 1, 2018.

"We decided to take over the farming operations on this farm when the two owners of the prior tenant both passed away, leaving no owner to manage the farming operations," said David Gladstone, President and CEO of Gladstone Land. "Since our management team has been in the business of growing strawberries for many years, we decided to plant strawberries and manage the operations ourselves. Now that the strawberry crop is nearing the end of its harvest season, we have taken the opportunity to sign a lease with a quality farmer for the next ten years. We don't want to be the operators of our farmland, but our broad-based experience allows us to be, when necessary. We are pleased to have a long-term lease on this farm with a strong new tenant so that our management team can get back to doing what we believe we do best, which is being the landlord and long-term farmland partner with our tenants."
